Intent, Implementation and Impact Statement

	Key Points
Our Intent	To inspire a love of learning about the past alongside teaching the skills and knowledge to enable our children to become confident historians and set the foundations for their future learning.
Our Implementation	Curriculum Rationale: A high-quality history education helps our children gain a knowledge and understanding of Britain's past and that of the wider world. We aim to provide our pupils with a deep understanding of their local history and that of the wider world and the skills and key knowledge to enable them to make sense of it. Children are taken step-by-step on a journey through the chronology of British History whilst developing a clear understanding of how these events relate to learnings about Ancient Civilisations, local history and the achievements of significant individuals. Our curriculum has been carefully sequenced from EYFS through to the end of Key Stage 2 to ensure our children build on the knowledge and skills learnt to enable them to be confident historians. How has learning been sequenced? • We have mapped out the progression in each area and identified the vocabulary, knowledge and skills we explicitly teach. • Pupils are taught the key skills of historical enquiry, learn that History is interpreted in many different ways and learn how to communicate and organise their historical understanding. • For our pupils in EYFS and at the start of KS1, a strong focus is placed on ordering key events in their own lives and finding out about the past from others around them. • As they move through KS1, the children gain a greater understanding of where they fit in within their family history and about significant events and people past living-memory. • By the time they leave KS2, the children will have a coherent knowledge and understanding of Britain's past and that of the wider world so when entering KS3 pupils will be able to access the KS3 history curriculum.

The Impact	Ensuring Inclusivity: - We understand that a child's success in History should not be limited by their academic ability/progress in a core subject, or any additional need, and that the way History is taught and assessed, should be in direct response to the needs of the learners. - All History lessons and assessments offer the opportunity for written, oral or practical responses, enabling each child the opportunity for success. - A range of methods are used to teach and assess History to meet the learning needs of all our pupils. - We recognise the fact that we have children of differing ability in all our classes, and so we provide suitable learning opportunities for all children by matching the challenge of the task to the ability of the child. We achieve this through a range of strategies which are differentiated by task, expected outcome and/or support from peers or adults.
	How is progress and attainment measured? - History in EYFS is measured through the children's progression through the ELG. - Throughout Key Stage 1 and 2, pupils' progress in History is measured through both formative and summative assessment. - Pupils are assessed in each of the key skills as well as through the key knowledge they should know. - Formative assessment in History includes key questioning and opportunities for oral and written responses as well as practical work. - Summative assessments are carried out at the end of each half-term and allow pupils the opportunity to showcase the knowledge and skills they have learnt. - Children are assessed in History only on the historical concepts, skills and knowledge taught - not their literacy skills.

	EYFS	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
National Curriculum	ELG: Past and Present Children at the expected level of development will: - Talk about the lives of the people around them and their roles in society; - Know some similarities and differences between things in the past and now, drawing on their experiences and what has been read in class; - Understand the past through settings, characters and events encountered in books read in class and	Pupils should develop an awareness of the past, using common words and phrases relating to the passing of time. They should know where the people and events they study fit within a chronological framework and identify similarities and differences between ways of life in different periods. They should use a wide vocabulary of everyday historical terms. They should ask and answer questions, choosing and using parts of stories and other sources to show that they know and understand key features of events. They should understand some of the ways in which we find out about the past and identify different ways in which it is represented. In planning to ensure the progression described above through teaching about the people, events and changes outlined below, teachers are often introducing pupils to historical periods that they will study more fully at key stages 2 and 3. Pupils should be taught about: - changes within living memory. Where appropriate, these should be used to reveal aspects of change in national life - events beyond living memory that are significant nationally or globally [for example, the Great Fire of London, the first aeroplane flight or events commemorated through festivals or anniversaries]		Pupils should continue to develop a chronologically secure knowledge and understanding of British, local and world history, establishing clear narratives within and across the periods they study. They should note connections, contrasts and trends over time and develop the appropriate use of historical terms. They should regularly address and sometimes devise historically valid questions about change, cause, similarity and difference, and significance. They should construct informed responses that involve thoughtful selection and organisation of relevant historical information. They should understand how our knowledge of the past is constructed from a range of sources. In planning to ensure the progression described above through teaching the British, local and world history outlined below, teachers should combine overview and depth studies to help pupils understand both the long arc of development and the complexity of specific aspects of the content. Pupils should be taught about: - changes in Britain from the Stone Age to the Iron Age - the Roman Empire and its impact on Britain - Britain's settlement by Anglo-Saxons and Scots - the Viking and Anglo-Saxon struggle for the Kingdom of England to the time of Edward the Confessor - a local history study - a study of an aspect or theme in British history that extends pupils' chronological storytelling.	- the lives of significant individuals in the past who have contributed to national and international achievements. Some should be used to compare aspects of life in different periods [for example, Elizabeth I and Queen Victoria, Christopher Columbus and Neil Armstrong, William Caxton and Tim Berners-Lee, Pieter Bruegel the Elder and LS Lowry, Rosa Parks and Emily Davison, Mary Seacole and/or Florence Nightingale and Edith Cavell] - significant historical events, people and places in their own locality.	knowledge beyond 1066 - the achievements of the earliest civilizations – an overview of where and when the first civilizations appeared and an in-depth study of one of the following: Ancient Sumer; The Indus Valley; Ancient Egypt; The Shang Dynasty of Ancient China - Ancient Greece – a study of Greek life and achievements and their influence on the western world - a non-European society that provides contrasts with British history – one study chosen from: early Islamic civilization, including a study of Baghdad c. AD 900; Mayan civilization c. AD 900; Benin (West Africa) c. AD 900-1300.

	Learning (fundamental skills – what will be constantly revisited?)
Chronology (Sequencing)	Begins to sequence some events or at least 2 related objects in order.	Sequence some events from their own personal or local history.	Sequence at least 3 events from their own personal or local history.	Use timelines to place events in order.	Names and places dates of significant events from past on a timeline.	Uses timelines to place and sequence local, national and international events.	Can sequence accurately all time periods studied, using relevant dates and time markers.
Enquiry	Use pictures and photographs to create a timeline and to find out information.	Find answers to simple questions about the past from sources of information e.g. artefacts and toys.	Observe or handle sources to answer questions about the past on the basis of simple observations. Begin to ask questions about artefacts and sources from the past to deepen their knowledge (who, what, why, when, where). Begin to use books and ICT to find answers to questions.	Compare a range of first and second-hand sources and begin to discuss validity / reliability. Compare information that they find on the internet to reliable information texts. Use ICT and quality information texts to research.	Use the library and internet for independent research. Select and record relevant information. Independently ask questions about artefacts, photographs and sources of information. Discuss validity and reliability of primary and secondary sources. Use a range of evidence to build up a picture of the past e.g. ICT, information texts, photographs, artefacts. Choose relevant material to present a picture of one aspect of life in time past.	Use the library and internet for research with increasing confidence, finding quicker and more efficient ways of retrieving specific and relevant information. Identify primary and secondary sources independently and question their reliability and validity. Choose relevant material to present a picture of one aspect of life in time past and justify their choices.	Evaluate methods of retrieving information and choose the most relevant and efficient for them. Suggest omissions and the means of finding out. Bring knowledge gathered from several sources together in a fluent account, answering questions from others confidently and using evidence to support their answers.

Cause and Consequence	Begin to understand consequences as a result of something that happens to them.	Discuss consequences in terms of immediate results of an event in the present.	Begin to recognise causes of actions and events in history and what happened as a result.	Sees that historical events have causes and consequences that result in change over time. Can list some causes and consequences of key historical events.	Sees that historical events have causes and consequences that result in change over time. Can list a greater range of causes and consequences of key historical events.	Identifies some of the consequences of events in terms of immediate and longer-term effects.	Sees consequences in terms of immediate and longer-term effects and can see that people were affected differently.
Continuity and Change	Recount changes in own life over time.	To know that things change over time.	Begin to describe changes over time	Can talk about the past in terms of periods e.g. Stone age, Romans; and understand there are differences and how things have changed between the two.	Can explain how a specific time period differs from another/today.	Describes main changes in a period in history, beginning to use words such as: social, religious, political, technological and cultural.	Describes main changes in a period in history using words such as: social, religious, political, technological and cultural using evidence for their choices and reasoning.
Organisation & Communication	Children express themselves accurately in the correct tense.	Sort events and objects into groups (i.e. then and now) Use timelines to order events or objects Tell stories about the past. Talk, write and draw about things from the past.	Describe objects, people or events in history. Use timelines to order events or objects or place significant people.	Begin to communicate ideas about the past using different genres of writing, drawing, diagrams, drama role-play, storytelling and using ICT.		Communicate ideas about the past using different genres of writing, drawing, diagrams, drama role-play, storytelling and using ICT. Plan and present a self-directed project or research about the studied period.
